A British View of the American Tariff.

Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

"The promoters of the McKinley tariff meant it to push forward the policy of America for the Americans. One method of realizing it was to keep all work within their own dominions. The country was to be made self-sufficient; what could be produced at home was not to be bought abroad. That was the key-note of the McKinley scheme, and it is working out the idea of its designers with the precision and effectiveness of a machine."

REPUBLICAN victory in the coming election would retard for a long time the progress of the sound commercial doctrines that underlie the commercial greatness of Great Britain and alone maintain British ascendancy.—London Evening News.

IN 1890 it was a conflict of predictions now our adversaries must face trade statistics and prices current.—President Harrison, June 11, 1892.

Politics and Civil Service Reform.

When Land Commissioner Carter accepted the chairmanship of the Republican national committee he resigned the land commissioner and became a private citizen.

When Secretary of State Harry, of Pennsylvania, accepted the chairmanship of the Democratic national committee he held fast to his secretaryship and has up to date shown no intention to let go of it.

When Secretary of State Ohley accepted the secretaryship of the Democratic committee of West Virginia he all of a sudden continued to keep his Marion county grip on the good and fat office.

If somebody would bring these things to the attention of Mr. Cleveland, that uncompromising champion of civil service reform would politely request Messrs. Harry and Ohley to resign something or other or get out of the Democratic party, which doesn't believe in this way of mixing partisan politics and the public business.

"Public office is a public trust."

Is the sanitary condition of Wheeling all that it should be in view of the nearness of cholera and its threatened advance on this country?

In his interviews Senator Faulkner confidently predicts that the Democrats will have from eighteen to twenty majority in the legislature, and Democrats have great confidence in his judgment. Since the majority is sure to be so safe, Democrats in Ohio county can vote for the excellent material offered on the Republican legislative ticket without endangering their party's control of that body.

The Asiatic Marauder.

The European coast of the Atlantic ocean is a week distant from New York. Wheeling is a night from New York. This measures the distance of cholera from Wheeling, to put on it the best possible face.

The distance may be much less. Cholera may already be on the way over, may be in New York or any other Atlantic port, and this would bring it within a day or so of Wheeling.

The first and best defense against this terrible enemy is absolute cleanliness. This we have not in Wheeling. The streets are dirty, the alleys and out-of-the-way places dirtier. If there be not cesspools that need regeneration it is the first time this good fortune has come to us in many years.

At such a time the city should put its house in order, let the cost be what it may for honest and thorough work. Every household should look well to the sanitation of its own premises. A liberal application of the whitewash brush will be highly beneficial.

Abstinence from alcoholic drinks will be on the side of safety. A plain diet will serve a good purpose. Fresh vegetables in this time of drought are good things to let alone.

The city should begin at once and set a good example. The present dirty condition is an invitation to the Asiatic marauder to come right along and get in its deadly work.

Up goes the tariff, up goes the cost of labor's necessities of life and down go wages.—Register.

Since the passage of the McKinley act the general cost of living is less and the general range of wages is higher. Fact knocks your theory in the head every time.

TAMMANY has the proud satisfaction of knowing it is necessary to Mr. Cleveland and can't be had by him. What is the use, then, of being bigger than his party?

Not Afraid After All.

The Register notes a coming meeting of so-called independent colored men in Ohio, and remarks that "colored men in West Virginia and throughout the United States would serve themselves best by following the lead of their Ohio brethren."

These independent colored men of Ohio are to form a colored Democratic club, and if enough of them go in the state of Ohio may be carried for the Democracy. It is not said who pays the freight.

It is a painful surprise to see the Register advocating this sort of thing. What has become of the terrifying dread of Negro Domination with a big N and a pot-bellied D? Don't forget your lesson. You are to be afraid of the negro always and everywhere, for he goeth about seeking whom he may dominate.

And don't neglect to remember that once upon a time there was an effort to get some West Virginia negroes in the Democratic line through the instrumentality of a negro adventurer who was not so careful as he should have been of the confidential letters of some able Democratic politicians. You recall those gen'le Epistles to the African, don't you?

Mr. LABOUCHERE would rather be an independent and funny than to be a peer and be obliged to look solemnly wise.

CAPTAIN DOVENER will have a majority that will gratify a good many Democrats, for reasons not necessary and too numerous to mention.

The Switchmen's Strike.

The other railroad unions decline to join hands with the switchmen, the strike is declared off, and it looks still more as though it should not have been struck.

If the related organizations had thought the strike justifiable, or that their own existence was menaced, it is a fair inference that they would have made common cause with the switchmen, with whom, of course, they have brotherly sympathy.

Their refusal to go the way of the switchmen has been foreshadowed and is therefore no surprise. It pronounces the failure of the strike and emphasizes the folly of undertaking it. It was a costly blunder and reflects on the leadership which ordered it.

Being out and defeated, the men will now be interested to know whether their leaders can get their places back for them.

To-day's INTELLIGENCER contains some interesting information about the ready-made clothing business and the effect of the McKinley tariff on that business. The McKinley act has not made clothing higher, but it has made Democratic free trade prophets ridiculous.

The Ohio river is almost too low to be respectable.

The U. S. G. C.

Some interesting figures relating to the United States Glass Company are published to-day. Wheeling stockholders will be attracted to them. There is the item of $90,000 paid to Mr. Shinn for organizing the company. That is to say, the several concerns paid this amount to Mr. Shinn for bringing them together and melting them all down in one pot.

If the service rendered by Mr. Shinn was worth all this he must have been subjected to enormous mental and physical wear and tare. This item will stand a good deal of explanation.

THERE are now almost as many cab stands as there are cabs. The vehicles are gone and yet they are there. What has Fourteenth street done to be given the cold shoulder? The Register, as heretofore, has only to shout out of the window when it wants to go calling.

Are the cabs to become an issue in politics?

KNOCK-ABOUT NOTES.

From Wheeling to Elkins is a short and comfortable run now that the way is open by the Grafton & Greenbrier. The trip is made within seven hours, allowing time at Grafton for one of those breakfasts with which Landlord Hoover is wont to console the appreciative inner man. Up through the wild and rocky gorge of the Tygart's Valley river, through scenery such as Americans go abroad to rave over. The traveler who does not know the country looks incredulous when you tell him that back of these hills are good farming and pasture lands, and that presently the train will go with the river through a gap that opens as the gate of an earthly paradise.

This is not a too strong prose use of poetic license. The rural beauty, the enveloping mountain grandeur, the restful peace of this Tygart's Valley country are conditions so different from the bustle and rattle and smoke of the busy town that one seems to have left the earth behind. This is ideal mountain scenery, which requires the plain and the mountains in sharp contrast. Deer Park and the resorts about it are higher than Elkins, but they do not satisfy as Elkins does the soul that longs for mountain scenery. They are shut in and the mountain scenery is shut out, and there is no coming together. People from the lowlands want to see the mountains when they go to the mountains. When they don't see what they want they think somebody has robbed them of their money's worth. Perhaps a sea forever placid, however deep and broad, would be too dull to be a sea. We look for the roaring, tumbling, high-running waves, the shrieking and the moaning and the howling of the storm, and when these raw materials are in evidence we are convinced that we are on a real ocean.

There is visible mountain enough in this Tygart's Valley country; to the west Laurel and Rich, to the east the ranges of Cheat and the Alleghenies beyond. This lovely landscape has only to be well known to draw hither an increasing number of summer sojourners, not by any means the least valuable crop that can be produced. What would Florida be without the crop of fat-pursed Yankees she raises every winter? or the barren sand reaches of New Jersey without the hordes who come because there is an ocean there? Tygart's Valley is rich in coal and timber and pasture lands, but scenery and bracing mountain air and the purest of pure water are in these days marketable commodities in this country, and Tygart's Valley has them.

The far-seeing man who is now the secretary of war chose this beautiful valley for his home, selected one of the twenty-one hills which surround Elkins, set up his domestic altar there and called it Halliehurst, in which his wife is to be found if you are good at guessing riddles. It is a vision of gray—stone, old shingles, turrets and dormers—banked against the green of the virgin forest. Taste and labor are making the forest a park. It has often been asked, "what in the world does Mr. Elkins expect to do with all that house?" You have not been in it many minutes before the question has answered itself. The little Deer Park cottage sufficed for his family. Halliehurst makes room for his friends. It is constructed on the lines of a broad hospitality, and every nook speaks a welcome. Guests are made to feel that the house was built for them, and they are expected to enjoy as much of it as they can. Many of the people round about have dropped in "just to see the house," and they are as welcome as anybody else. Not many of us have seen many such homes, and to see one is a good deal of an education.

Ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, father-in-law of Secretary Elkins, is building another on the next hill to the east; and next to him Mr. R. C. Kerens, of St. Louis, who was a delegate in the Minneapolis convention and succeeded Chauncey L. Filley as Missouri's member of the national committee, is building on the next hill. These two homes will be entirely of stone. Their owners expect to occupy them next summer. President Harrison hopes to have a summer home here, would probably have begun to build it this season if the Minneapolis convention had not renewed for him the lease on the White House. Unless Senator Davis comes up with reinforcements, his Castle Democracy will be in danger of being stormed and carried by the enemy.

Sitting with Mr. Elkins in his library, an ideal apartment with books on a wide range of subjects and which I fain would have brought away with me, I asked him if he had noticed that the Register had charged that in his speech in the Huntington convention he had assailed viciously the mining laws passed at the late session of the legislature.

Mr. Elkins replied: "I saw the statement in the Register, made three days after the convention, and I was somewhat surprised because it misstated what I said entirely. I said nothing of the kind; indeed, I did not know that there had been any mining legislation passed at the session of the legislature, and I did not know until I saw one of our attorneys, Mr. Wood Daley, about the matter, when he explained to me that two acts had passed the legislature, both of which were now before the court. Inasmuch as these acts did not affect the mining laws of the northern portion of the state, my attention had not been drawn to them. I could not have said what the Register stated, for this reason; because I knew nothing about the acts, as they did not affect the mining laws of the region of the state with which I am familiar. Moreover, here are my notes of that speech, which all the correspondents had at their disposal at that time. It looks a little suspicious that the Register makes this charge three days after the convention, when it had a corps of watchful correspondents attending the convention, taking down everything said, and who were there for the purpose, among other things, of noting and emphasizing anything that might be said to the disparagement of the Republican party and in favor of the Democratic party. I very much regret that the Register finds it necessary in this campaign to begin this sort of course toward the Republican party. I had hoped, with all West Virginia Republicans, that this campaign would be conducted upon a high plane on the issues which divide the parties, and on a basis of fairness."

The town of Elkins holds its head high. It remembers that less than three years ago it was Leadville—a blacksmith shop, a church and a store. Now it numbers about 1,100 souls, has a varied and prosperous business and a banking house second only to the best in Wheeling and Huntington. The founders of Elkins had the prudent forethought and liberality to save a wooded spot as a public park, which will be more appreciated as the population increases and buildings fill up the now open spaces. This is the New England idea, a feature which adds to the beauty of the villages of that region and to the comfort of those who dwell in them. The visitor finds an agreeable surprise in the attractive, well-built and liberally furnished hotel, and is glad to know that there is good prospect of a change in the management.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A photographer in the Tyrol made a negative of ten tourists against a background of pine woods. When he developed the plate a faithful presentment of a large bear in the act of making for the denser timber appeared in the edge of the forest. Neither the man with the camera nor any of those in the group had known that the brute was near.

"Maudie," he faltered, after he had made his trembling confession and the dear girl had said yes, "shall—shall—are you going to—to tell anybody about it?" "How can I keep from telling it, Harold?" said the maiden. "My lips are not sealed." And Harold attended to the sealing at once.—Chicago Tribune.

When Edison visits New York, says the Press, of that city, he rushes into his Wall street office, sits down to his desk for about five minutes, perhaps aways a story with his counsel, ex-Congressman Wise, and then rushes off again. He occasionally visits a beanery.

A Good Word from a Neighbor.

Wheeling Evening News of Wednesday.

The INTELLIGENCER celebrates its fortieth birthday to-day. The INTELLIGENCER has been an active participant in the making of the history of West Virginia, and has borne its part with unvarying dignity and ability. Few people realize the interesting memories that cluster about a leading newspaper of forty years' standing. In nearly every important event in national life such a paper, if it performs its full duty, becomes an important factor. In times of great excitement it has more power to mold opinion and direct action than any other medium. It eventually becomes a part of public life, and its career a potential part of public history. Old forces may die out and new ones come in, but a successful newspaper that accommodates itself to public demands may have a career of unending prosperity. The News is pleased to know that the fortieth year of the INTELLIGENCER's history finds it more vigorous and more prosperous than any of the preceding.

Every Testimonial.

In behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla is strictly true and will bear the closest investigation. No matter where it may be from, it is as reliable and worthy your confidence as if it came from your most respected neighbor. Have you ever tried this excellent medicine?

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills. They should be in every home medicine chest.

THE only reason for Mr. Cleveland's nomination, and the thing that forced his nomination in spite of all the efforts of politicians, was the fact that, in the minds of the Democratic masses, he represents the idea of free trade. The platform is an unmistakable declaration against all parleying with protection. It puts the Democratic party in the field as committed to the policy of sweeping away every shred of a protective duty.—Henry George, the Free Trader.

THE Man Without a Stomach.

May exist as a museum freak, but most of us recognize the stomach as necessary to life and comfort. Most of us experience a little trouble from this source occasionally, wrong action of the stomach causing dyspepsia, etc., and often the trouble extends, involving the liver and bowels, without our finding the cause and cure. We find also that the bowels and kidneys (nature's sewage system) become clogged with effete matter, from which comes impure blood, biliousness, pimples, eruptions, nervous swellings and cancerous complaints. The Burdock Blood Bitters, taken at the beginning, or at any later stage, arrests the trouble, restores the disordered organ to activity, thereby removing every vestige of disease. B. B. B. is an absolutely pure extract of roots and herbs, which cannot injure even the most delicate constitution, and as a cure for Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Bad Blood, etc., succeeds in 99 cases out of 100.
